Crime has dropped
23% in Ogden since
Matthew Godfrey became mayor.

I'm encouraged by the 23% drop in crime but as a father, I hope for even better.

Mayor Matthew Godfrey's Plan to Further Reduce Crime

1. More officers patrolling the streets

Ogden is going to expedite the hiring of six more police officers. Over the last eight years, since Matthew Godfrey became mayor, Ogden has hired 18 new police officers and crime has dropped more than 23%—including a drop in violent crimes of 43%. That's no coincidence. The best way to stop crime is to put more officers on the streets.

2. Zero-Tolerance policy for gang-related crimes

Ogden is going to put in place two-man patrols specifically assigned to find and stop gang activity.

3. More immigration officers to deport criminals who are here illegally Mayor Godfrey has asked our congressional delegation to get Ogden two more ICE agents so that we can deport all illegal alien criminals immediately.

4. More prison space, no early parole

Ogden is working with State officials to make sure that criminals finish their time in jail rather than receiving early parole.

5. Better communication between the police and citizens

Ogden will be implementing a process to ensure better follow-up occurs between citizens who report suspicious activity and the police. No longer will you simply report and forget. Now you'll report and receive a follow-up status call from the police.
